ugly first half into an ugly game. Dre Bly News In a rather surprising move, the Indianapolis Colts announced that they have cut running back Ahmad Bradshaw, per ESPN's Chris Mortensen. The Colts didn't comment on the move and certainly haven't given Bradshaw much of a chance to do much of anything this season, but if they were looking for a veteran and familiar face at the position, now is the time to do it. Bradshaw, a second-round pick in 2011, has been pretty much a non-factor in 2012. He did carry the ball 17 times for 36 yards and a score in the victory over the Dolphins, but has mostly been a healthy inactive the rest of the way. The 6-foot, 245-pound Bly, who played at Divison II St. Augustine's (Fla.) College, was a seventh-round draft pick by the Chargers out of Nebraska in 2010 and was sidelined most of 2011 with an ankle injury. But he saw his first playing time this season after taking over at the position from Ryan Mathews for a couple of weeks and the Chargers have managed just three catches for 38 yards and a score, with one of those receptions going for a loss. Bly isn't eligible for another practice this year after having his contract voided due to an ca3bfb1094
