On his radio program today, Glenn Beck trotted out an ostensibly "exclusive" report, one that shows the New York Times to be working with outside sources to leak information to tie James Comey to a nefarious conspiracy. So not only were the Times reporters involved in the Comey leak, but they were working with people on the outside to make sure they got their information. According to Beck's theory, the Times was getting some "clever" advice from James Clapper, whom he cited to describe how Clapper had been a guest on the Times' own columnists' weekly, Talk of the Times, to help them better pitch Comey leaks to their various contacts. The first leak, Beck posited, came from "two sources, two very bright people, one of them very well connected, a very good friend of Comey's" who leaked information to the Times in order to embarrass Comey. Glenn Beck was asked how he knew that the NYT "had this particular person's thumb on the pulse of this particular information being leaked." Beck replied: "I don't know his name. I heard it one time on Talk of the Times. I heard it there." Later on the program, Beck said that he had heard the information to which he was referring second hand as well: c9d1549cdd

-Tavuk Celje Grompula-Tavuk Celje () is a Serbian sports club from Celje, Slovenia, that has one men's handball team that plays in the A Slovenian Second League. History Grompula Celje was founded on 11 March 1947 in a formal meeting of workers and civilians in the Celje Brewery. The club was founded as Grompula. The first matches were played on the brewery's sports courts. Their first match in the Slovenian Second League, their second-tier league was played on 3 October 1948 away with Šalata Celje and won by 3-4. After getting promoted to the First League, they made their debut there on 30 May 1950. Their first match won was played away with Voždovac. The goal difference was not positive, so they had to play home to Kranj, something they won 5-2. By the end of the 1950s, Celje won the Slovenian championship, so it was decided that their home match will be played in Ljubljana, a city in which they will have to play their home matches in the future. This was also the beginning of the long line of different hosts their has been. Their first two away matches in Ljubljana on 24 February and 3 March, it was won by 3-4 and 13-14, later on 6 March the away match was won by 1-3. On 19 June 1962, their first match in Belgrade took place. The first goal was scored by Matija Mijatović. Their first victory came on 7 July 1962 at home against Belgrade powerhouse

Banjaluci, Celje won 3-2. During the 1960s, they had four Yugoslav League representative head coaches. Before the UEFA break-up, Celje was promoted to the Yugoslav second-highest level, the first-tier, at the end of the 1968-69 season. Between 1963 and 1994, they played 22 seasons in the Yugoslav First League (19 seasons in the second-tier SFR Yugoslav First League between 1967 and 1993 and nine seasons in the highest division, Yugoslav First League). From 1959 to 1977, the Celje side went through four different Yugoslavian champions: Banjaluci (three times), Kranj (once), Mačva Šabac

Artillery units are normally considered one of the least powerful types of military units. The artillery units are only useful for small scale engagements, usually preceded by a quick bombardment and followed by a cavalry charge. In this game, this is no longer true. Artillery units are very powerful, and are incredibly flexible. You can use them to slowly maneuver around an enemy line, force an enemy retreat, or deliver a crushing barrage in an area that is too far away for normal infantry to support it. This game allows you to mix and match artillery units. If you're in the middle of a major land battle and need to quickly finish off the enemy, you can use three medium caliber (230mm) artillery pieces, three light caliber (155mm) artillery pieces, and then two super heavy caliber (300mm) artillery pieces. Or you can use several artillery pieces to soften up an area for an attack by a larger force. Or perhaps some of your artillery pieces need to be replaced with anti-aircraft units and some of your infantry needs to be replaced with bombers. Land battles are possible, although they're rare. Air battles, on the other hand, are very common. You can have up to seven different air units. They can be used to either support infantry or be dropped from the sky on the enemy. You can use them to either soften up an area for an attack by a larger force, or to give yourself an initial strike that can increase your victory chances. Or perhaps you want to use your air units to bomb an enemy force. The air units can be used either on your own, or in conjunction with one of your infantry divisions. Notes: 1. These uniforms are WIP and have not been fully tested. 2. These uniforms require 2.1 to play. 3. Please keep in mind, that the uniforms for the other countries are very similar to these, with just a few changes to fit in with the other country's culture and history. L e t s b e d (- 3) .
