Crack Keygen.Q: Assigning & Defining a Value in a Python Class I am trying to figure out the best way to initialize a value in a python class. For example, say I have the following code: `class MyClass(object):
def __init__(self): self.my_value = 'a default value' my_object = MyClass()` How would I have `my_object.my_value == 'a default value'` instead of a `my_object = MyClass()`.

maintained under denaturing conditions.Q: Rails 3.0.5 - how to get number of days between two dates In Rails I need to calculate the number of days between two dates (not in same day) - I know how to get this in plain ruby, but how can I achieve this in Rails? A: Nice. In rails you can use Time.now.to_date for this. If you want to just output it - in the view or controller - just concatenate the two dates, and divide by a number of minutes/hours/days/weeks and output it. If you want to do the calculation in your model, you can use something like this: @duedate = Time.now.to_date @number_of_days = (@duedate - startdate).to_f / 1.day A: Regarding to your concern, I just want to recommend this method to get the number of days. Cached days as ActiveRecord object instead of Time
