The University of Arizona's Board of Regents voted to amend the school's Title IX policy in response to a recent federal judge's ruling that the college and its athletics department are to blame for the mishandling of a sexual assault case. The board of regents approved a new policy on Thursday morning, admitting that its previous statement of denial and apology was not acceptable. A third-party review is still being conducted, but the athletic department has already started implementing the new guidelines, according to an email to UA students. "The new guidelines are a significant departure from the previous statement of denial and apology," the email read. "The new guidelines set forth clearly defined expectations for the athletic department and provide greater detail about who is responsible for administering the policy." This is a significant victory for students, especially since the ruling that the regents approved a response that wasn't adequate. "For students, the issue is not really the University's new policy, but whether the new policy is adequate to ensure that students are protected." According to Amanda Swann, vice president of strategic communications at the UA, the school is currently reviewing the ruling to see if the regents need to formally petition a higher court for a rehearing. "In the meantime, the University is preparing to put in place the new policy, which will help us enhance the resources we offer to all students," Swann wrote. The policy, according to the email, includes an increased emphasis on accountability for employees, which will allow the university to begin investigating employees who violate the policy. A new student conduct director will be appointed and training programs will be implemented to educate students and faculty on the new policies. "For students, the issue is not really the University's new policy, but whether the new policy is adequate to ensure that students are protected," Swann wrote. Following the ruling, the university said that it will begin reviewing all cases of sexual assault reported on campus and to reassess its policies on Title IX

What's New In AutoCAD?

Print & Draft: Save draft images as PDFs to easily share your designs with team members, suppliers, or clients. (video: 1:05 min.)

New 3D Mesh Cuts feature: The new Mesh Cut feature enables you to place meshes over 3D objects. This is an incredibly powerful way to create cuts into specific 3D parts.

Live Bounding: This feature makes it easy to calculate real-time 3D dimensions on a path, and then add them to your drawing.

Convert existing drawings to AutoCAD files: With this tool, you can convert any sheet-based drawing to a fully 3D drawing, in one step.

Refresh: With the Refresh tool, you can refresh and validate your drawing on multiple levels without a large CPU impact.

New Spelling Check feature: Ensure that you have no spelling errors before moving to the next step. The spell check feature is now much more accurate.

New Drafting techniques: Easily develop complex line segments, and planar cuts that you can then edit to create complex designs. (video: 1:21 min.)

Seamless Paths: Turn standard 3D objects into seamless paths, allowing you to quickly create complex objects from simple 3D lines.

Visible Area Option: This tool allows you to determine which areas of your drawing you want to display on the canvas.

Refresh Operator: Use this tool to refresh and validate each drawing object in your drawing. (video: 1:09 min.)

New rasterization options: These tools allow you to rasterize curves, points, and areas in your drawing.

RGB Paint: This tool

gives you a fast, accurate way to paint in colors in your drawing. Bezier Paint: This tool gives you a quick and accurate way to draw lines and curves. Erase tool: Quickly erase objects, and create an immediate visual difference. New tools: Command reference with AutoCAD User Guide: The Command Reference tool offers a quick and accurate reference for new commands. New drawing and command set associations: Associate commands with your drawing easily with the new drag and drop interface. Layers: Put your objects on multiple layers to organize your drawing.

System Requirements For AutoCAD:

Windows XP or later. Intel Pentium III 1.2 GHz or better. Memory 512 MB or better. Graphics card with 64 MB or better. Screen resolution 800 x 600 or better. OS: Windows 7 or better. Trialware 1.x or later. NOTE: If you already have installed trialware on your computer, please uninstall trialware first. Installation: 1. Install the trialware on your computer. The trialware will have a log-
